Western launches $18 million capital campaign

On October 7, 1995, Western Washington University officially launched The Campaign for Western, a three-and-a-half-year effort to raise $18 million in new private support. Carver Gymnasium was turned into Carver "Balloon" for the evening celebration attended by more than 350 special guests. The campaign's theme, "Opening Doors to Tomorrow," describes the multitude of new opportunities that will be created for Western students through the campaign. As of press time, the campaign had gained $13 million in support for campaign initiatives, primarily in the form of new endowments and annual program support.

Joining by hundreds of Western's closest supporters including alumni donors and volunteers, Western Washington University President Karen W. Morse announced at an October 7 gala celebration the public phase of The Campaign for Western, an $18 million private fund raising campaign.

The University's first comprehensive capital campaign supports five university priorities: teaching and research enrichment, scholarships and fellowships, the arts and cultural activities, international initiatives, and ongoing annual support and other targets of opportunity.

"This campaign signifies our commitment to Western students," Morse said. "Its success is crucial to our vision for Western's future and will ensure our ability to provide the best public undergraduate education available in the state of Washington."

Donors have committed some $13 million since the campaign began on July 1, 1993. The public phase will run through December 31, 1996. Every gift made to the university during the campaign time period will count toward the overall goal.

The activities included a reception and dinner as well as a special tribute to Lifetime and Benefactor members of the Presidents Club. Leadership gifts from Wilder Construction, Red and Betsy Haskell, and Moose and Vi Zurline were announced at the kickoff. Alumni from Microsoft, the campaign's largest donor to date, also were present to receive special recognition.

"The public announcement of The Campaign for Western signifies an important milestone in the history of the university," said Campaign Chair Red Haskell. "We are confident about reaching our goal, and believe the excitement generated by the campaign will be shared by all alumni and friends who believe in Western."

WESTERN RISES IN NEW NATIONAL RANKINGS

For the second year in a row, U.S. News and World Report has ranked Western among the top 15 regional universities in the West, moving it up from thirteenth place last year to eleventh.

WWU ATHLETIC HALL OF FAME INDUCTS MEMBERS

Howard Jones -- an all-state football player at Bellingham's old Whatcom High School, a four-sport star at Western, and later a coach and athletic director in the Bellingham School District -- was inducted into the WWU Athletic Hall of Fame in September. The honor was in recognition of his stellar performance on the field from 1937 to 1939, when Jones helped Western (then Western Washington College of Education) win the Northwest Conference.

VEHICLE RESEARCH INSTITUTE PLANS FOR FUTURE

Western's Vehicle Research Institute (VRI) has a 21-year tradition of building solar-powered and electric vehicles that win top prizes in national competitions. Next May, the engineering technology students of the VRI plan to enter Viking 23 and Viking 25 in the American Tour de Sol, a race for hybrid and electric cars that starts in New York City and ends in Washington, D.C.

In addition, the students will work on a contract with the U.S. Department of Energy and Defense to build a new power generator. Trademarked "The Midnight Sun Generator," it uses solar cells to capture energy produced by burning fuel in a ceramic tube. Michael Seal, director of the VRI, says they plan to replace the motor of the Viking 5 race car with one fueled by these generators, improving weight, efficiency and power.

WOODRING BRINGS EDUCATION HOMEPAGE ON-LINE

An educators' homepage on the Internet was established last summer by Woodring College of Education. The World Wide Web page provides immediate access to teachers, administrators and students around the globe. "The beauty of this homepage is that Woodring's Instructional Technology staff already has done the searching and located the premier educational sites available," said Dean Larry Marrs.

Perhaps most helpful to teachers and administrators are the national educational resources. For example, Route 66 is an electronic map of all public schools connected via the Internet, providing total link-up with just clicks of the mouse on the map area and school of choice.

Woodring's homepage address is http://www.wwu.edu/~wce/ Links include the EDRC database, the Washington State Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, the U.S. Department of Education and numerous educational newsgroups.

The honor was in recognition of his stellar performance on the field from 1937 to 1939, when Jones helped Western (then Western Washington College of Education) win the Northwest Conference.

Three other members of the talented 1938 team also have places in the Hall of Fame: head coach Charles "Lappy" Lappenbusch and players Frank Chorvat and Bob Tisdale.

Dick Pangallo, an all-West Coast player for the Vikings in 1958, was inducted with Jones in the September ceremony.

The Canterbury Tales at Western

The Canterbury Tales by Geoffrey Chaucer is a medieval classic, written about 1387 to 1400. A glorious illuminated manuscript was made of the work around 1410, probably employing a scribe to write the text, artists for the paintings that illustrate the various tales, and limners to produce the intricate gold vines and leaves, called ‘limming.’

Western highlights

Whatcom County School Consortium has received a $75,000 federal grant to expand the Professional Development School for area educators, a pilot project developed at Everett Community College last year. Western provides faculty and support to the project.

Western assistant professor Marcia Davidson wrote the grant proposal, which was developed in concert with Western education professor John Towner, Ferndale School District special programs director Jim Gibson, and area teachers.

Already designed as the state’s outstanding campus wellness project, the “We CAN” program at Western is a finalist in the search for “exemplary” alcohol and other drug prevention programs that colleges and universities nationwide can emulate. The study was undertaken by the Harvard School of Public Health on behalf of the U.S. Department of Education’s higher education center for alcohol and other drug prevention.

“We CAN,” under the leadership of Wellness Center Director Pat Fabiano, supports healthy choices among students, primarily through their peers and by changing social norms. The program was launched in 1993.

Western’s Engineering Technology Department has received $57,255 in grants from the Society of Manufacturing Engineers (SME) Education Foundation. The grant finances computer software and allows Professor Clyde Hacker to enhance research and instruction, as well as add to the engineering technology library.

Biology Professor Jane Ross received the SUGUNA Award of Excellence from the Sydney University Graduates Union of North America, comprised of more than 1,000 graduates from the Australian university who are now living in the U.S. and Canada. The award recognizes noteworthy achievements that have enhanced the positive image of Australia in North America.

Ross is the first woman to be president of WWU’s faculty senate and the only woman to receive the Paul and Ruth Olscamp Award for Outstanding Research at Western. She has published about 120 scientific articles and co-authored two books.

Lisa Rosenberg is common to collegiate and national NACA conference co-coordinator for the Pacific Northwest Region of the National Association for Campus Activities, an organization of more than 1,200 colleges and universities and 580 talent firms across North America.

Microsoft

Microsoft manager named Western trustee

Microsoft’s general manager for the Windows 95 development team, David W. Cole, has been named to Western’s board of trustees by Governor Mike Lowry. Cole received both his B.S. and M.S. degrees from Western (‘84, ’86).

Cole led Microsoft’s effort to plan, build, test and deliver the Windows 95 operating system to the market. According to The Seattle Times, he is one of only two or three people who understand its entire complex design.

While a student at Western, Cole worked with a team to develop the software program “College Writer.” He joined Microsoft after graduating with a degree in English.

“We are very pleased with this appointment,” said President Karen W. Morse. “Mr. Cole knows Western well and is committed to the future of education here.”

Western is served by a seven-member board of trustees who establish policies for the university; trustees serve six-year terms.

Western’s alumni golf tournament . . .
a swinging success

Eighty Western grads grabbed their clubs and donned their spikes in early September to participate in the inaugural WWU Alumni Association Golf Classic. This first year’s tournament was held at Shuksan Golf Club, one of Whatcom County’s newest and most challenging courses.

Utilizing a scramble format, alumni golfers of all abilities (and we do mean all) took to the links, under the direction of tournament directors and alumni board members Jon Sitkin and Tony Larson.

A very generous Whatcom County business community donated a variety of prizes and many others signed on as hole sponsors for the tournament. Plaques, golf balls, and glassware were presented to the first, second and third place teams.

Even the last place team came out well, receiving trophies, free golf lessons and a round for four at Shuksan. One of the prize highlights, given out in a drawing following the tournament-ending barbecue, was a round for four at Bear Creek near Bellevue.

Tournament co-director Jon Sitkin noted that there were “nothing but positive comments throughout the day and following the event.” He added that the tournament will now become an annual event, though it will likely be moved to mid-August next year to avoid conflict with existing tournaments and to give public school teachers a chance to enter.

All net proceeds from the tournament benefit the Alumni Scholarship Fund. This year, the event raised close to $4,000.

Grist of Goldsmith

By Chris Goldsmith/Alumni Director

As we enter Western’s first ever capital campaign, it seems appropriate to let you know a few numbers, which show that WWU alumni do, indeed, support their alma mater.

For instance, between July 1, 1994 and June 30, 1995, 5,023 Western alumni contributed $710,251 in financial support to Western through either the annual fund effort or in separate gifts to The Western Foundation or the Alumni Scholarship Fund.

This year, because Western is in “capital campaign mode,” alumni can think of their contributions as doing double duty. Those gifts will not only be counted as a contribution to whatever fund you, as alumni, feel is worthy of your support; but each gift is also noted as a campaign contribution.

We, as alumni of Western, might even want to carry that doubling concept one step farther this year. In order to ensure that Western’s first capital campaign is the rousing success we know it can be, alumni might want to consider “doubling” the gift we made last year.

Alumni financial support of an alma mater is not only important for such things as campaigns. The number of alumni giving back to their institution, along with the dollar amount contributed by graduates, is also used as one of the criteria in those national rankings Western seems to be more and more a part of each year.

So when you are contacted this year by the student callers for Western’s annual fund, think about that “doubling concept” and let it be known to all that Western alumni are taking more and more pride in the institution that helped give us our start in life.

Alumni scholarship winners announced

Seven Western students were recently selected from a field of more than 125 well-qualified candidates as recipients of Alumni Scholarships. Each of the seven winners will receive $1,700 toward their education goals.

The scholarship winners are: Rory Baird, a business administration/marketing major from Cashmere; Nona Brady, who is studying English; Jeff Burningham, a communication major from Spokane; Carla Gross from Seattle (undeclared major); Stain Heuer, a chemistry student from Marysville; Daisye Orr from Seattle (undeclared major); and Touk Praseuthsy from Raymond, who is studying business and economics.

The awards are funded solely through investment earnings of the WWU Alumni Scholarship Endowment Fund. The fund, established in 1982, now stands at more than $280,000 — thanks to generous donations from Western alumni and friends.

Alumni provide campaign leadership

Three Western alumni are taking active leadership roles to make The Campaign for Western a true success. As co-chairs of the campaign's volunteer-driven fund raising committees, their challenge is to enlist the assistance of fellow Western alumni and friends to achieve the campaign's goals.

Frank "Moose" Zurline, WWU Class of '50, is chair of the Leadership Gifts Committee, which has a goal of raising $2,750,000. The Leadership Gifts Committee will focus on gifts of $25,000 or more.

Zurline is marketing director of Bellingham-based Eco Waste Solutions Group. He and his wife Vi are founding members of the Presidents Club and have funded the Zurline Scholarship Endowment, which supports WWU athletes. In addition to numerous other honors, Moose is a member of Western's Athletic Hall of Fame and received the Western Foundation's "Volunteer of the Year" award in 1994 and 1995.

Olympia resident and Class of '70 alumnus Lyle Morse is co-chair of the Patron Gifts Committee. Morse will chair the Seattle-area component of the Patron Committee's efforts to raise $1,000,000. His committee will focus on raising gifts ranging from $10,000 to $25,000.

Morse is president of Norse Furniture Corporation, also located in Olympia. He serves on the WWU Alumni Association Board of Directors and, along with his wife Vicki, is a member of the Presidents Club. The Morse's daughter Dana is a Western student.

With a goal of raising $500,000, the Special Gifts Committee is co-chaired by Seattle resident Robin Russell, WWU Classes of '81 and '82. Her committee will concentrate on gifts of $5,000 to $10,000 to support the campaign.

Russell is a vice president with Bank of California, and is past president of the WWU Alumni Association. She continues to actively serve on the alumni board and is a member of the Presidents Club.

"Alumni leadership is critical to the success of The Campaign for Western," said President Karen Morse. "Through their active support and involvement, alumni are making a statement that they believe in Western's future and care enough to help make a difference."

The Campaign for Western is chaired by Bellingham civic leader F. Murray "Red" Haskell, chairman of the Haskell Corporation. Robert Helsell, president of Wilder Construction, is the chair of the Nucleus Committee, which is well on its way toward reaching its goal of raising $11,750,000.

Joining Morse as co-chair of the Patron Committee is Richard Pedersen, senior vice president with the Bellingham office of Dain Bosworth. Teaming up with Robin Russell as co-chair of the Special Gifts Committee is Gragg Miller, general manager of Bellingham's Coldwell Banker Miller Real Estate. Leading the campaign's marketing efforts is Richard Haggen, president of Haggen, Inc., headquartered in Bellingham.

Earnings from that fund thus far have provided $93,000 for 47 scholarship awards.

"Western is privileged to have supporters like the Haskells," said President Karen Morse. "As we move into the 21st century, their contributions will make a great difference in the lives of hundreds of Western students."

Haskell, a former officer and past president of the Western Foundation, was honored as its first "Volunteer of the Year" in 1993. Board chairman of the contracting firm that bears his name, he received the Whatcom County Lifetime Business Achievement Award in 1994.
