

TABLE 1
Examples of the Same Swifties in Two Forms:
Pun Only (P) and Pun-Plus-Context (C)

Shortest	P: "The carpenter brought the dessert," said Tom piously. C: "The priest brought the dessert," said Tom piously.
Longest	P: "I have a hunch that perhaps the prisoner escaped by climbing down a rope," said Tom condescendingly. C: "Any fool can plainly see that the prisoner escaped by climbing down a rope," said Tom condescendingly.
Modal length	P: "I see that all burgers are on the barbecue," said Tom gratefully. C: "Thanks for putting all those burgers on the barbecue," said Tom gratefully.

TABLE 1
Examples of the Same Swifties in Four Forms: Context and Pun (CP), Context Only (C), Pun Only (P), and No Pun and No Contextual Connection (X)

CP:	"This might be a good place to camp," said Tom tentatively.
C:	"This might be a good place to park," said Tom tentatively.
P:	"This is where we will camp," said Tom tentatively.
X:	"This is where we will park," said Tom tentatively.
CP:	"What a shame that your cookie is empty," said Tom unfortunately.
C:	"What a shame that your cupboard is empty," said Tom unfortunately.
P:	"It's okay that your cookie is empty," said Tom unfortunately.
X:	"It's okay that your cupboard is empty," said Tom unfortunately.
CP:	"I suppose I like modern painting," said Tom abstractly.
C:	"I suppose I like adventure novels," said Tom abstractly.
P:	"I surely like modern painting," said Tom abstractly.
X:	"I surely like adventure novels," said Tom abstractly.

TABLE 1. Example of Two Swifties in Which a Contextual Connection Was Absent or Present and in Which Redundancy Was High (H), Medium (M), or Low (L)

No context	Context
Example 1
H: "I know I really like flipping pancakes," said Tom flippantly.	H: "I suppose I sometimes like flipping pancakes," said Tom flippantly.
M: "I know I really like cooking pancakes," said Tom flippantly.	M: "I suppose I sometimes like cooking pancakes," said Tom flippantly.
L: "I know I really like eating pancakes," said Tom flippantly.	L: "I suppose I sometimes like eating pancakes," said Tom flippantly.
Example 2
H: "This is a very good place to put our tent," said Tom tentatively.	H: "This might be a good place to put our tent," said Tom tentatively.
M: "This is a very good place to put our camp," said Tom tentatively.	M: "This might be a good place to put our camp," said Tom tentatively.
L: "This is a very good place to put our coats," said Tom tentatively.	L: "This might be a good place to put our coats," said Tom tentatively.